Layers record different repeating motions

In three tested sequences: extra turns near a short unstable cycle, followed by a global return.

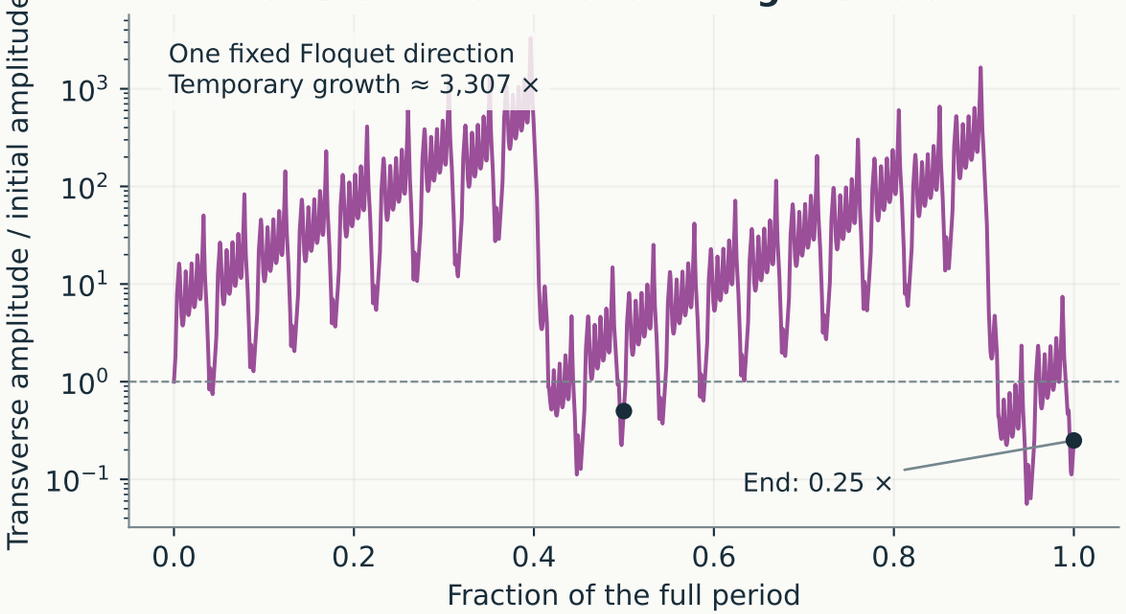

1 A long motion reuses a short orbit

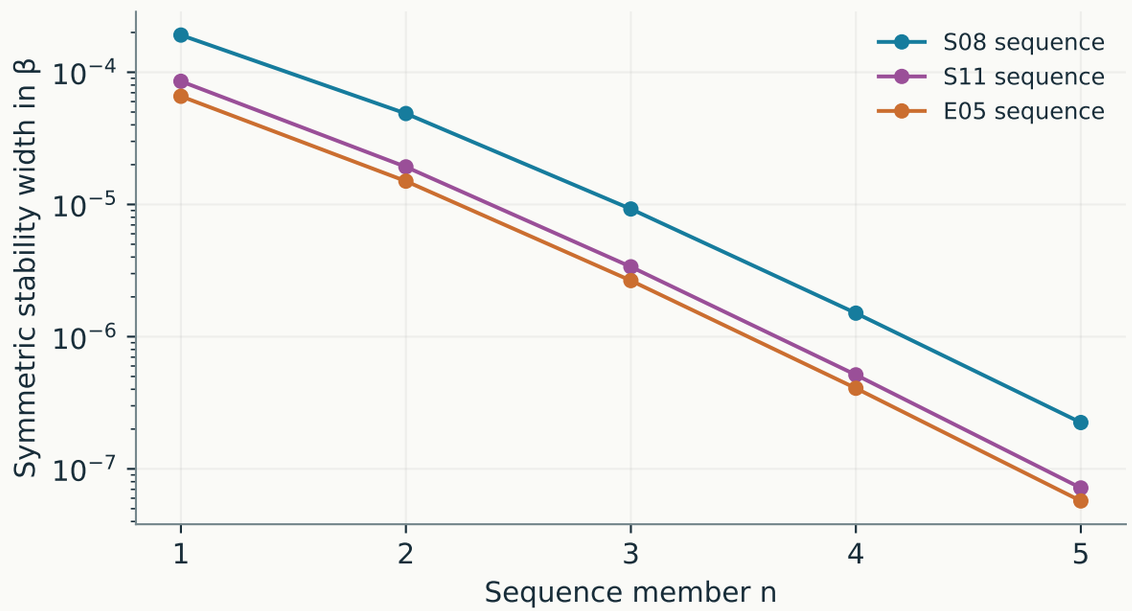

2 More section crossings near that orbit

3 Growth is undone during the return

4 Additional turns need thinner windows

A layer is a range of parameter values supporting a repeating attracting motion.
These computations explain three sequences; they do not classify the whole atlas or give finite escape thresholds.